The Floyd Country Store, home of the Friday Night Jamboree, was constructed around 1913. Many of our Jamboree friends still recall when the Store was the place in town to buy everything - a Floyd size version of today's "superstore."

Along about 1983, two of the store's former owners were in a local bluegrass band that gathered at the store most every Friday night for a practice session. People passing by would knock on the doors, asking to be let inside so they could better hear the music. Pretty soon, the band got tired of being interrupted every few minutes to let someone else in the store, and so they just left the doors open. As the crowds grew, other musicians came to join the fun. The rest, as they say, is history.

In 1999, a new sound system was installed, the stage was enlarged a bit, and some cosmetic improvements were made. Other than that, the Jamboree just keeps rolling on as it has for years, except that the music seems to get better and the crowds bigger with every passing month.

Many of those who attend the Jamboree are regulars, and for them, the Jamboree is a place to see old friends week after week. But the Jamboree also gets visitors every week from all across the country, and around the world. The March, 2000 issue of Country Living magazine identified the Floyd County Store as one of the two best places in the country to hear bluegrass music (the other place was a club in New York City).

At the Jamboree, we're all very proud of the musicians who bring their instruments and their talent to the store every week. The show starts every Friday at 6:30 p.m. with a bluegrass gospel group. Then at 7:30, the dancers hit the floor, and the "flatfooting" begins to the music of area bluegrass or old time bands. At 8:30, Ralph Hayden and the Barbershop Grass take the stage, followed at 9:30 by the Clyde Williams Old Time Band. About 10:30, we round up one of the groups that can be found picking outside or upstairs in the store, and they will play till we close around 11:30 p.m.

And the great music isn't just heard on stage. During the warmer months, the Jamboree becomes something of a miniature fiddler's convention, with bands playing in the alleys, driveways and parking lots. When the weather cools down, groups can be found pickin' in an upstairs room.

The Jamboree operates on "Granny Rules" - no smokin', no cussin', and no drinkin'. It's a great time for the whole family, and you're likely to see kids from six to ninety-six out on our hardwood dance floor. Many a flatlander has found out they have clogging in their blood when that old time music hits their soul.

So come see us at the Jamboree! Admission is only $3.00 (under 16 admitted free), and this includes a raffle ticket for one of our famous hams. The Jamboree is a kind of happening that is hard to find anymore - musicians coming together to play just for the love of the music. For more information or advanced tickets call 540-745-4563.
